Sample: N = 28,405,543 (mid-year 2024 resident) / 34,090,000 (pre-crisis unadjusted projection)

EXTRACTED EMPIRICAL METRICS & TABLE COORDINATES:

• Tier 0 (Pre-crisis unadjusted projection): Baseline projected population 33.88M (UN WPP 2015) to 34.09M (INE 2011 Census projection) by 2024, reaching >34.8M by 2026.
• Tier 1 (Migration-adjusted resident population): Mid-year population contracted from 30.77M (2016 peak) down to 28.21M (2022) and 28.41M (2024), tracking R4V cumulative flight of 7.77M Venezuelans worldwide (6.5M in Latin America & Caribbean).
• Tier 1 (Annual net migration flow): Cumulative UN DESA net migration loss exceeded 4.62 million individuals between 2015 and 2023, with peak annual outflow of -1,355,602 in 2018.
• Tier 2 (Working-age cohort collapse): Resident 15-64 cohort shrank from 20.24M (2016) to 18.30M (2021), a loss of 1.94M working-age adults; gap vs pre-crisis expectation is ~3.8M.
• Tier 2 (Selectivity & Brain Drain): Early emigrant cohorts comprised 60% university/tertiary graduates; 80-85% of all emigrants are in prime working age (15-49 years).
• Demographic Bonus Inversion: Effective household dependency ratio surged to ~65 dependants per 100 working-age adults; 35% of households consist of elderly couples or single seniors.

VERBATIM SOURCE QUOTE / TABLE RECORD:

El estudio estimó que la población en Venezuela se redujo a 28,7 millones de habitantes... se registró una tasa de crecimiento demográfico de -1,1% en un período de cinco años, impulsada principalmente por dos factores: el impacto masivo de la emigración y el incremento de los riesgos de mortalidad... Venezuela perdió las ventajas de su bono demográfico.
